

- The tail (origin) of the arrow is placed at the attribute or table containing the foreign key. This side “points from” the referencing relation.
- The head (tip) of the arrow is placed at the attribute or table containing the primary key—the key being referenced, from the referenced relation.